WELCOME TO THE 2024 SPORTFISH CATALOGUE

We're fishing obsessives, fanatics, gear junkies. It's what we love. This is our life, our livelihood, it's pretty much all we talk about the whole time.

Our mission is partly about providing an amazing customer experience, with friendly advice & tuition for every level of angler. It's also about offering the ultimate range of quality products to suit every budget. We love nothing more than testing products and working out what's great and what's not. The 8,000+ products in this catalogue are there because they're the best quality for the price. We like to think of this catalogue as a book of dreams for every fly fisher, carefully curated to make your choices a little easier, so you can shop with confidence, knowing that quality is guaranteed, whatever your budget.

Last year we made a tough decision not to produce an Autumn/Winter edition of the Sportfish catalogue, due to changing customer habits, increased printing and postage costs, plus being mindful of our environmental impact. However, our catalogue will always remain a fundamental part of our business, and now that we'll only produce it annually we've decided to make it even bigger and better. We've added new content from the pros to help you learn and improve, with top tips for better casting from our own AAPGAI Master instructor Robin Elves on page 73, how to read the water by double World Fly Fishing Champion Howard Croston on page 155, and tips for improving your catch rate from Welsh international Shaun Watkins and Trout & Salmon editor Andrew Flitcroft on page 97. We've also added a page to celebrate our customers' fish of the year on page 128 and something on the environmental charities we actively support that are so important to protecting the sport we all love on page 168.

As always, our team has been working hard to bring you the latest tackle and gear, some of which we've highlighted here. We're excited to introduce Sage's revolutionary SPEY R8 rods (p.8) and SPEY II reels, as well as Hardy's award-winning Marksman rods (p.13) and Sovereign Reels (p.36). Stay protected with Simms' new range of superlight trousers (p.148) and Solarflex tops (p.145). We're proud to launch Mackenzie's new Atlas Graphene clothing range (p.129), which is truly groundbreaking. RIO's new GameChanger line will make choosing between "Scandi" and "Skagit" easier than ever. Lamson has updated their best-selling Liquid and Remix reels with Liquid S and Remix S (p.42), while Greys have introduced great value-for-money ranges including their Cruise reel (p.47), Fin bootfoot waders (p.121), clothing (p.136), fly boxes (p.104), and nets (p.172). Our fly tying section includes new products from Veniards, Semperfli, and Loon.

We believe that as a company we are responsible for achieving the highest standards of environmental practice and for operating in a sustainable manner. Our catalogue is printed using FSC® (Forest Stewardship Council) certified paper and mailed out in a recyclable FSC® certified wrap. Sportfish is a Planet Mark Certified Business, meaning we are committed to reducing our carbon emissions by 5% annually. In fact, in 2022/23 we reduced our carbon footprint by 7.6% and this year we're aiming for even more.

Our team is as passionate about the sport as you are, and they love nothing better than applying their knowledge and expertise to make your fishing the best it can be. Whether that's talking you through the latest kit, providing tips and techniques to up your game, welcoming you for some tuition on our lakes or trying out a rod or two on our casting pool, we've got you covered. Just give us a call.

We hope you enjoy our new annual catalogue as much as we have enjoyed putting it together for you.

Best wishes and tight lines.

The Sportfish Team.

PURCHASING A SINGLE-HANDED FLY ROD

They seduce, they are shiny, they glisten with come buy me allure... they are new fly rods.

No matter how long you have been fishing, whatever discipline or, indeed, area of the sport or experience... there is something beguiling about a new rod. Dreams, imagined adventures to come and excitement are entwined with every waggle, flex and touch. Beware. Is it the right rod for you?

The perfect place to start is with a built-in guarantee of some sort. There are a good many dodgy deals out there... the internet is quicksand for the naive. Be guided by your pocket, product reputation and knowledgeable help and forsake any deals that look to be too good to be true: invariably they are. Go with practical knowledge - irrespective of where you are in the sport. Ask someone who knows, like the team at Sportfish.

Purchasing a single-handed fly rod is almost as angst ridden and loaded with nervous excitement and self-doubt as buying a home or a car, arguably worse. Why? Dreams, aspirations and hopes are bound up in that leap into the unknown and what doesn't help is that there are few bad rods out there. Most are serviceable, many are impressive.

So, where does one start? Three things should guide you:

- 1. The best you can afford
- 2. Application for primary task
- 3. You actually like it

Set yourself a price that you can comfortably afford. You will probably want to add a line and reel with the purchase, too, so work within a budget. The overriding element is what you want the rod to do. Let that be your guide. It is no use trying and falling in love with a beautiful rod that is hopelessly ill-suited to the waters you fish.

There are, of course, fly rods that cross the divide; a medium-to-fast action (see my action guide below) 9' #5 or #6 rod will carry you around the world and embrace many species including trout, sea trout, mullet, bass the odd Icelandic salmon (if you are fortunate), bonefish and a myriad of smaller sporting species.

My view remains that you should try a variety and let your hands and wallet determine your decision - but TRY THEM. Ask a knowledgeable sales assistant - the Sportfish team are brilliant: they fish and they know their fly rods.

So, here's a quick overview:

River Rods

Small rivers and brooks

6'6" to 8' rods in the #2-4 weight line category. Try lines with rods, you may feel that a #2 rod is best loaded for short casting with a #3 line.

Medium to large rivers

On chalk streams and freestone rivers such as the Wharfe, Usk and Clyde etc. choose an 8'6" as a minimum, even extending to the more specialist 10' #3-5, which is great for nymphing and classic wet fly fishing.

Mayfly

Rivers are popular during this period and many anglers prepare for this one occasion only, but turning over a big, bushy mayfly is NOT the place for delicate #2 fly rods. A 9' #4 is better and a #5 will do a good job.

Specialist Nymphing Rods

There is another consideration; fixed line - Euro nymphing styles are growing in popularity each season within the River fishing community. Once niche, it is now mainstream. A 10' to 10'6" #2-3 or 4 should be a consideration if you want to do this style of fishing. I tend to favour mid to tip flex rods to propel the light lines and long leaders associated with the style.

Again, try one before venturing into this fish filled world.

Lake Rods

Small stillwaters

You can get by with the shorter style of rod for stalking and clear water use - a 9' #5-6 is perfect so it can double as a river rod too, or you can use the longer rods - the 10' #6/7. But, you MUST consider where you are going to fish and the style of fishing. There is no point trying to get a 9' #5 to propel a heavy, sinking line and a booby - it can be done, but it might be a struggle.

Big Reservoirs

Friends fish reservoirs on the bank very effectively with a 9' #5/#6. Would it be my first choice? No. Far better to use a 10' #6 or 7 that will work well from the shore AND the boat. Let's not forget the oft overlooked 9'6" for #6 or #7 - it's a great length of rod and huge fun. Many prefer a 10' #8 for the sheer ability to 'ping out' a long line towards the horizon but remember the heavier you go the less fun you will probably have. It's your choice and, of course, by selecting from the last mentioned rods you have something very serviceable for sea trout and light salmon. Win-win.

If it's fun to use, meets the criteria that you want from a fly rod and puts a smile on your face after a few casts with the right line, then it's job done - as long as it's within budget.

CHOOSING A DOUBLE HANDED FLY ROD

Part of my job is to advise on fly fishing equipment and, perhaps not surprisingly, the question I'm most often asked is: "What fly rod do I need?"

Asking what salmon rod you should buy is like asking how long your leader should be, there is no single answer for every situation. Thankfully, one salmon rod can cover more than one situation – but not all of them – and having the wrong tool for a given job can be a painful experience.

Price aside, the main questions to ask yourself are where and when you will be fishing, as the size of river and time of year will dictate the size of flies and type of lines you will be using. Let's start at the beginning of the season, on a big, early spring river. In these conditions you require a rod that:

- Can handle heavy lines/shooting heads/fast tips and turn over large tube flies
- Is capable of long casts in harsh conditions and difficult winds
- Can play fish hard in heavy water without folding
- Can mend line and steer heads (often sinking) at range, to give effective water command

The ideal tool would be a 15' #10 or #11 and my preference would be for a fast action rod capable of delivering high line speed. Such rods have a steely feel and, providing the caster has the necessary technique and room, can wind up a lot of tension during the cast to fire line a long way, even in gale conditions.

A smaller rod, such as a switch rod between 11ft and 12ft, would be a severe disadvantage in these conditions but they offer advantages on smaller summer rivers in low water when you will be fishing lighter line weights.

Switch Rods

- Are less cumbersome and, in conjunction with shorter heads, make drawing flies in slacker pools more effective
- Allow delicate presentation with light line and require less room behind the fisher to make the cast, opening up overgrown or steep-sided river sections
- Are lighter in action and easier to load without much line behind the caster, making it easier to achieve a squarer cast in areas of limited space

The middle ground between the fifteen-footer and the switch would be either a 13' #8/9 or 14' #9/10.

Although only a foot shorter 14-footers feel surprisingly light in the hands compared to 15-footers. This length of rod has been gaining popularity in recent years, mostly down to advances in the line systems that are now available. Lines such as shorter shooting heads and Skagitls enable large flies and fast tips to be cast much more easily than in the old days of full sinking lines (the preserve of 15-footers).

A 14-foot rod is great for floating line work on big/medium rivers and it's not hard to see why they are considered the new all-rounder. However, as with anything termed 'all-round' there is a trade off in certain situations and being a foot shorter they are compromised in lifting heavy lines and turn over compared to 15-foot rods.

13-foot #8 or #9 rods are the preserve of smaller/mid-size rivers or, for my own part, floating/sink tip work with smaller flies on low water big rivers. But what, you may ask, are the failings of a switch rod in these circumstances? The answer is simply range, add a head wind into the equation and I have been beaten in reaching the required distance.

Finally, I feel it's worth pointing out that some rods are sold as line specific, such as shooting head or Skagit or a Spey line rod. I accept I need to have different lines at my disposal, but I really do not want to take four rods with me every time I go out. Thankfully, many rods can handle many different types of line system, and is a question worth asking when purchasing – the Sportfish team has a comprehensive understanding of all models and casting styles and will be happy to advise you.

Sage R8 CORE Fly Rods (R8 Core Technology)

Designed to enhance the two-way connection from hand to fly and back for greater feel, flow and control.

Increased purity of graphite provides even more reactivity and sensitivity, shifting energy further down the blank and into the handle. This transfer of energy creates a more natural extension of your arm, ultimately resulting in less wasted effort and intuitive reactivity. The new axial fibre formulation behind R8 CORE enables Sage to shape a rod with a stiffer, stronger backbone but a more sensitive tip and more connected feel. Revolutionary material technology and maximum versatility, giving you complete control.

MORE FIGHT, MORE TOUCH

Sage SALT R8 Fly Rods

Most salt rods are built for power and strength, often sacrificing feel and touch. When developing the ultimate saltwater rod, Sage took their new R8 graphite and added 25% more strength-per-weight without the need to add more material, fillers or reinforcement. To maintain feel for fine touch shots and precise presentations, their rod designers shaped a taper and found the right profile and fibre alignment that delivered strength, fine touch presentation, and a more intuitive sweet spot. The result is the SALT R8. Gone are the days of unwieldy and unforgiving saltwater rods.

Key Benefits

- 25% increased strength for greater pulling power and quicker fish landing
- Enhanced durability and toughness to withstand more rugged situations
- Intuitive sweet spot that prioritises touch and speed for shorter shots and on-demand casts
- Saltwater specific guide set - Fuji K-guides resist corrosion, while their angled, oversized shape prevents snags
- Heavy-duty reel seat with oversized locking rings to keep the reel tight to the rod for greater contact, rigidity and a more direct connection when fighting powerful fish

Key Features

- Sage's R8 technology
- Tempest blue blank colour
- Slate primary thread wraps with graduated white and grey trim
- Premium flor grade cork handle w/EVA butt
- Black rod bag with new cord lock for quicker, easier and cleaner storage
- Aluminium rod tube with Sage medallion

CUSTOMER REVIEWS

I visited Sportfish, Reading to try the Hardy Marksman 9'0" #6 rod just after Christmas. The conditions were awful, but the rod was extremely accurate despite this. It felt responsive and really nice to cast. I also tried the 10'0" #7 which was even better in the conditions. In the end, I bought both and couldn't be happier.

I own two of these rods. The 10ft 4wt is my main hill loch rod for wild browns. It's incredible. I also have the 9ft 6wt which is on a whole other level and has become my go to multi-use fly rod. Nothing is too much for the 9ft 6wt; D17 with a booby, no bother. Size 16 dry fly on a 15ft leader, easy. If you have the means buy these rods. They are expensive but honestly worth every penny.

EURO NYMPH FISHING

Euro nymphing was created to catch spooky fish in shallow, slow flowing rivers. It has now been adapted to fish fast water of up to a metre or so deep. However, the French leader is extremely versatile and can be used to fish all types of water.

The Euro nymph leader itself is made up of an extremely long tapered monofilament leader and is designed to be fished on long, soft fly rods. At the end of the tapered leader there's a short indicator piece. From the indicator you have your tippet and flies. You should vary the length of your tippet to the depth of water you're fishing: 3ft feet deep = 3ft tippet.

The important thing to remember when using a Euro nymph leader is to flick or lob the flies rather than cast. Unless you're fishing extremely long distances you rarely use fly line when fishing this method.

Snowbee Knotted Tapered French Leaders

A 12½ft – Tapers from 0.55mm down to 0.15mm (4.1lbs). 6 sections with a Hi-Viz orange indicator attached. Looped at both ends.

B 16ft – Tapers from 0.55mm down to 0.10mm (2.4lbs). 6 sections with final 2 sections in clear monofilament. Looped at both ends.

FLY FISHING FOR PREDATORY SPECIES

Fly fishing for predatory species - pike, zander or perch in freshwater or for bass, pollock and mackerel in saltwater - is rapidly growing in popularity within the UK. When you can't chase trout and salmon on our rivers and lakes why not head to the coast, a local canal or secluded pike lake for some alternative but exhilarating sport?

We have put together a small selection of tackle that is ideally suited to targeting any of these species. But, as always, if you would like more detailed help or information, please give Danny or any of his team of advisors a call (01544 327 111) or call into one of our stores and we will be delighted to help you.

HOWARD CROSTON

Double World Fly Fishing Champion and Global Fly Product Manager at Hardy and Greys

CHOOSING A FLY REEL

There's an almost endless choice when it comes to modern fly reels, with models to suit every requirement and taste, irrespective of whether you view a fly reel as an integral part of your equipment or as a piece of art that simply holds the line. I am fortunate to fish in many locations for varying species throughout the year so when choosing the right reel for the job I generally approach it in the order below.

Pick your drag system

The drag can be the single most important feature in a fly reel, or the least important depending on what you're fishing for and where. Disc drags typically offer the highest strength and the smoothest application of drag across a wide range making them ideal for chasing fish that are typically stronger, larger, or harder fighting. A disc drag can come in many forms: as a rule, fully sealed drags with carbon fibre discs are the most suitable for use in harsh saltwater environments chasing tarpon & bonefish as well as large salmon and other hard fighting species. These reels include those like the new Hardy Fortuna Regent. If you're mainly fishing in freshwater a non-sealed disc drag reel that has a lower maximum drag and by its overall design a lighter physical weight may be your best choice.

Click check reels are at the other end of the scale in terms of braking power but are no less practical in many situations. Typically lighter in weight and often of a more traditional design, click check reels still have many fans and thanks to their often louder 'traditional' sound and look they are particularly popular amongst salmon anglers who love to hear the raspy noise of line being taken against the click check system, as well as smaller river and stream anglers where strong drags are often not needed. Keep in mind if you need occasional 'additional' drag when using a click check reel, most have an exposed rim that allows more tension to be applied by 'palming.'

Arbor size

Large arbor reels offer many advantages and are still the preferred choice for most anglers. The large drum diameter gives faster line recovery, holds the fly line in larger, memory reducing coils and typically has a lower start up inertia and reduced 'drag gain' when a fish runs long and fast. Larger arbor reels also tend to be larger in overall diameter or hold less backing than a standard arbor reel however, most anglers favour the advantages they bring, and many have been designed to still offer the right combination of capacity vs line recovery. Standard arbor reels typically have much higher capacity and are generally smaller in overall size.

Bar stock vs Diecast

The two main materials used in fly reels are aluminium bar stock either from an ingot or bar stock forging and aluminium diecast. In general, bar stock reels tend to have a higher level of finish and design tolerance, are anodised to offer higher levels of protection, particularly in saltwater, and are generally more durable. Die-casting allows for an aluminium fly reel with many of the advantages of all metal construction at a more accessible price and offers a good performance for price compromise.

Cassette reels

Cassette reels offer huge advantages when a wide variety of fly lines are needed to ensure success. Particularly popular amongst stillwater anglers they have also found increasing favour with pike and salmon anglers in recent years as they allow the angler to easily carry a wide range of lines without much of a weight penalty. Cassette spools are generally polycarbonate or glass filled nylon and much lighter than an all-metal spool. Lower cost reels typically have a push on spool system whilst full bar stock reels like the Hardy Ultradisc Cassette feature an easy-to-use locking system.

During a normal season of fishing I will use pretty much every type of reel mentioned above and, on more than one occasion, I have been grateful for investing in the best reel for the job rather than making do with something less suitable. An adage that you often hear is that the reel does little more than 'hold line' – this is true enough at times but, if attached to the fish of the season or even a lifetime, a good quality reel that's designed for the job in hand just may help you put it in the net.

Hardy Ultradisc Cassette Reels

Hardy once again raises the bar with their Ultradisc Cassette Reel, featuring a lightweight frame design, built-in line guard to protect thin running lines and a full disc drag for serious fish-stopping power. Changing spools is quick and easy thanks to the reintroduction of the popular CLS locking system. Cassette reels used to be the preserve of the stillwater and reservoir angler carrying a multitude of sinking lines, but the introduction of a #4/5 model in the range as well as a #9/10 now opens up so many possibilities for river fishers, pike fishers and salmon fishers too. Supplied in a convenient case with two additional cassette spools.

Hand built in USA

I've owned quite a lot of different trout reels but this is the best I've tried. Really light yet solid, looks great. Useful features include the handle and spool groove for the arbor knot. I bought the 5/6 size and it helped to land some solid Avington rainbows on its first outing. Everything a modern fly reel should be and really nothing to dislike about it.

FLY LINES FOR SINGLE-HANDED RODS

Choosing the correct fly line to balance your fly rod and to best serve the intended purpose of the line is critical to fly fishing success. Your rod and line must work together to make casting and fishing a pleasure and the wrong choice of line can make even the best fly rod cumbersome and uncooperative.

Fly lines have two components: the inner core and the outer coating.

The core

Every fly line has a core that runs through the centre of the line. The core provides the strength of the line and is a major factor in how stiff (or supple) the line is. The core also controls how much stretch there is in a line, with low stretch cores providing greater feel and control in casting and fishing techniques, and more stretchy cores providing greater shock absorption with super light tippets.

Fly lines that are designed for tropical conditions are made with a stiffer core, as high temperatures will result in a standard fly line becoming very limp and soft, and not shooting well. If used in cool/normal UK conditions these lines are usually stiff and wiry and need to be stretched before they can be used.

The coating

The core of a line is surrounded by a plastic coating (usually PVC) that is bonded to the core. The coating influences the line's shape, weight and density.

Shape

Line manufacturers vary the shape of a fly line to make it perform in different ways. These 'shape' changes determine the line's casting behaviour. For example, a line with a long front taper and a light front end lands softly on the water and is great for presentation but would be useless with a heavy fly or in a tough wind. A line with a lot of weight at the front end, and a short front taper, would be far better suited for such challenging conditions, but would have poor presentation.

Weight

Fly lines are generally made to an industry standard weight called the AFTM standard. It is a number given to both line and rod (usually between 1 and 12) that ensures matching numbered fly lines and fly rods balance and load perfectly. For example, put a 6wt line on a 6wt rod and a 2wt line on a 2wt rod, and so on. The standard is based on the weight of the first 30 feet of line.

Density

The density of the coating determines whether the line floats or sinks. Floating lines have tiny 'microspheres' to make them float, while sinking lines have tungsten added to the coating to make them sink. Lines can sink at any speed between 1 and 8 inches per second.

A fly line is usually designated by a code on the front of the box, something like 'WF6F'. Usually, the first two letters of this code tell you the shape (profile) of the line, the number tells you the size (weight) of the line, and the last letter tells you if it floats or sinks. In this example 'WF' means it is a 'weight forward' line, '6' means it is for a 6wt rod, and 'F' means that it floats. If it had an 'S' at the end, it would mean that the line would sink, and a number after the S tells you how fast it sinks. For example, a 'WF7S6' is a weight forward, 7wt sinking line that sinks at 6 inches per second.

Anatomy of a typical Weight Forward fly line

Tip - This section attaches to the leader and may feature a loop for this purpose. It is short, usually 6-12".

Front taper - This section, typically 4'-12', increases in diameter as you move away from the tip. The longer and gentler the taper, the more delicately the fly will land.

Body - This thicker section is where most of the casting weight is and is the part that loads a fly rod for a cast.

Rear taper - Here the line reduces in diameter and can vary in length from 1' to as much as 12' - depending on what the line is designed to do.

Head - The 'head' of a fly line incorporates the tip, front taper, the body and the rear taper and it is usually the weight of this head that gives the line its size.

Running line - This last, level section is thin in diameter and light in weight, which means there is little drag when making the final cast, and helps anglers make long casts.

TOP TIPS FOR IMPROVING YOUR CASTING

Robin is one of England's top casting instructors and has been teaching people how to cast since 1987. You can see him in action in our new Sportfish series of how to cast videos by scanning the QR code shown here. That said, nothing beats a 1-2-1 lesson, whatever level you're at. DOUBLE HANDED RODS:

1 Hands

Hold the handle as relaxed as possible, remember you are not trying to strangle a cat. Keep the hands as far from each other as possible, the more leverage you have on the rod the better. Keeping your bottom hand around your sternum meaning the top hand opposite chin or face. Raising your hands above your head does not help at all.

2 Simplicity

Whatever movement you are going to make, from a roll to a Spey cast, keep it simple. The tip of the rod is guiding the line, so over-movement will distort the cast and the profile of the shape of the D loop.

3 Running Line

Holding onto the running line can be done with either hand, it makes no odds, just be comfortable. For shooting the running line make sure the loops held in your hand are of different sizes, this will help it not to tangle as it flies through the rings.

4 10 O'clock Stop

In the forward cast make sure the stroke is short, travelling in a rough straight tracking line. Always aim for 10 o'clock, the tendency is to aim at the water bringing the rod tip down but the line needs time to turn over before it lands.

5 Tuition & Practice

The best piece of advice I can give you is to have a lesson. Even an hour would make a day of frustration and bad presentation better. And don't ignore practice.

SINGLE HANDED RODS:

1 Hands

Hold the handle of the rod where it feels comfortable with the thumb lying on top. The line can be held under the one, two or three fingers, I prefer the index and middle. If you are using your left hand to hold the line, keep your hand around your tummy area.

2 Forearm Not Wrist

When you are casting keep the butt of the rod against your wrist. The rod should be an extension of your forearm and not the wrist.

3 Correct Acceleration

In the overhead cast start the rod pointing at the water and slowly lift gaining in acceleration as you reach and pass 10 o'clock and stopping at 1 o'clock behind you. A common fault is too much acceleration and this will cause the rod to go too far back giving a bigger loop and less power for the forward cast.

4 Full Turnover

In your back cast let the line turn over completely behind you including the leader and fly. This will give the rod a maximum weight to pull against in the forward cast.

5 10 O'clock Stop

In the forward cast the same rules apply as with a double handed rod and aim at 10 o'clock, still keeping the butt of the rod against your wrist. Having said all of this, the best advice I can give you is to have a lesson, even if you already know how to cast!

FLIES MIKAEL FRÖDIN SALMON

CLASSIC SERIES

All £8.99

Mikael Frödin's most successful patterns all have their origins within this family. These classic flies are tied with collar hackles in front of the wing and a 1/2 turbo cone to create turbulence, translucency and a broad profile. Different cones give different shapes and profiles. The regular cone for the slimmest fly and turbo cones for the fattest flies with the broadest profile. These flies will work in a wide variety of conditions, depths and speeds.

TOP TIPS TO IMPROVE YOUR CATCH RATE

RIVERS:

Shaun has represented his country on numerous occasions throughout the world and in June will be competing in the World Fly Fishing Championships in France. He's based in Mid Wales near his fishery, Craig Llyn, where he can be found most weekends and summer evenings.

ANDREW FLITCROFT
Editor of Trout & Salmon Magazine

STILLWATERS:

As well as fishing around the world, Andrew has fished for his country and spends most evenings on Rutland Water targeting big trout on dry flies.

DRY FLY:

1 Correct set up

For small to medium rivers, fish as light a rod and line weight as you can. I use a 3 weight rod. My preferred choice of leader is a 0.12mm diameter early season, then a 0.10mm later on.

2 Stealth

Dull drab clothing works best. Fishing to rising fish you will generally be in the river, so stealth is of paramount importance. Feel the bottom with your feet inching into position, trying not to scuff on rocks.

3 Leader terminal tackle

Use muslin on the tapered leader through to 2 feet away from the fly. Use mud to remove all shiny surfaces.

4 Dry fly choice

Use a fly such as an elk hair emerger or red baron which is easily seen for prospecting fish. Observe what the rise formations are, then you can fish an emerger pattern or a dun pattern to give you the best chance of a take.

5 Drying agent

Use a desiccant drying agent or powder to help your fly to float correctly, giving the trout the correct sight, shape and profile (basically a carrot shape).

NYMPH:

1 Don't go too heavy

Try fishing the run from a distance with lighter nymphs then increase as you fish into deeper water. The fish are usually in the margins just off the fast crease.

2 Multiple sizes

Keep multiple-sized tungsten beaded nymph patterns that you're confident fishing with in your fly box.

3 Distance

For trout the more distance you can maintain from the pool but still be able to maintain full control of nymphs, the better chance you'll have of achieving a positive take.

4 Balance

Balance your tippet diameter with the chosen weight of nymphs to obtain better presentation – light nymphs do not fish correctly with too heavy a tippet.

5 One rod, many methods

Don't rely on only one method. With one rod you can fish multiple setups, for example, tight line nymphs, duo or trio New Zealand style, swing spiders downstream, lift spiders upstream and many more.

BANK:

1 Try not to wade

Trout feel safe feeding in the margins, until disturbed. The further out you wade, the more you will push them into deeper, open water. If you see rows of anglers out-wading each other, steer clear. A scared fish is not a taker.

2 Simple is best

The more dry flies you put on a leader, the more compromised their presentation will be. It is better to fish one fly well, than two or three flies poorly.

3 Cleaner lift-off

When dry fly fishing, add Mucilin to the tip of your floating line and butt of your tapered leader. Your line will sit higher on the surface and make less disturbance when lifted off, and fish will feel less resistance when they take your fly.

4 Keep low

If you are fit and can crouch for extended periods, you will have greater success. Older anglers who sit on stools catch more fish as they are inconspicuous. Hunt a trout as you would stalk a rabbit and you will not go far wrong.

5 Diligence

Degreasing dry fly tippet to disguise it should be habitual. Every 20 minutes is ideal. If that fish of a lifetime comes along and you have been lazy, you will regret it.

BOAT:

1 Changing depths

If takes dry up, don't think the fish have gone. Temperature and currents change and will move food – followed by fish – up or and down in the water column. To adapt, change line densities or fish a team of buzzers.

2 Use weedbed cover

On a still day, if you park your boat in a surface weedbed, the fish will not see it. You can then ambush trout hunting around the weed for snails, damsels and fry. Kneel in the bottom of the boat and fish will come so close you can look them in the eye.

3 Pairing down

If fish are pressured, use fewer flies. Perhaps just one pattern, even if it is a nymph on a super-fast sinker.

4 Avoid drag

When drifting broadside to a big wave, presenting a team of dry flies across the wave will see each fly happily ride the same wave at the same time. Cast them straight downwind and each will rise and fall independently causing drag and refusals.

5 Where dark meets light

Target drop-offs on lakes and the fish will not be far away. Trout need the safety of deep water with nearby shallows offering rich feeding.

WADERS & WADING

For most fly fishers waders are essential gear for both river and stillwater angling and today's angler has more choice than ever before with modern materials, such as GORE-TEX®, making wearing them a comfortable and pleasant experience.

Non-breathable waders

Non-breathable waders are constructed from materials such as neoprene, PVC or nylon. They come with boots attached, which can have studded or cleated soles, and they are a less expensive option for infrequent fishers, for emergency use or for pond maintenance etc.

Breathable waders

Breathable waders are all about comfort. They are lightweight and, importantly, wick moisture away from the body so that even in tough conditions you forget you are wearing them and can just concentrate on your fishing. Breathable waders perform well in both warm and cold conditions but it is important what you wear underneath them. Jeans are not suitable as they act as a barrier to moisture control, so it is important to wear appropriate wicking base layers. Breathable waders fit better than other types of wader, for example the Simms G3 Guide range comes in 25 different sizes. It is important to get a good fit, not just for comfort and looks, but ill-fitting waders with excess material can wear prematurely and you don't want excess material flapping around your legs when wading in a fast flow.

Wading boots

Most breathable waders come with neoprene stocking feet and so require separate wading boots. Modern wading boots offer excellent comfort and ankle support and come in different sole options. Specialist treads, such as Simms Vibram® Drogrip feature the latest components to maximise underfoot stability and slip resistance.

Felt soles

Felt soles have been around for a long time and offer excellent grip on rock and gravel however, they are prone to slip on wet grass, mud and snow and metal studs can be added to help grip in these more slippery conditions. In some parts of the world felt soles are banned due to the risk of accidental transportation of invasive species, so it is advisable to check before travelling.

Rubber soles

Rubber soles are great for general all-round use, generally giving better grip on mud, wet grass and snow and they can also be studded or cleated for extra grip if required. The choice of felt or rubber is down to personal preference and to experience in different terrains; frequent fishers may carry both options to cater for all situations.

There are many different breathable waders on the market at various price points and the best are a good combination of breathability with durability. If you are a regular fisher then breathable waders are the recommended option and taking a little extra care of them will greatly extend their useful life.

BREATHABLE WADER CARE AND MAINTENANCE

Pinholes, scrapes and tears

The most common problems that occur in GORE-TEX® and other breathable garments are pinholes, scrapes and tears (we use the term 'pinhole' to identify any small violation of the breathable fabric that allows moisture to penetrate the interior of the garment) and these are usually caused by thistles, thorns, hooks and sharp rocks etc. Most thistles and thorns are deflected by the fabric, but sooner or later some of them will find a way through the weave and cause leaks. To avoid this, think carefully when walking the banks and go around thorn bushes or other potentially damaging objects, instead of right through them, and don't sit on any rough or sharp surfaces.

Inner leg abrasion

Inner leg abrasion is usually related to wrong sizing or heavy wear and is caused by the fabric inside the legs rubbing together when walking. Selecting the right size when making your purchase is extremely important to ensure that you prolong the life of your waders. You should also note that long days of walking and wading may result in fabric abrasions along the back edge of the seam, this is easy to repair and is a common wear and tear issue.

Proper care and storage

After each fishing session make sure to allow the product to dry properly before you store it.

Waders, jackets and packs etc. should be hung in a vented, warm and dry place and all boots should be properly dried before being put away. If clothes or boots/shoes are stored wet or damp then over time mildew, a form of fungus, will start to grow on them and this has the potential to cause severe damage.

On waders and jackets mildew causes problems such as seam tape lifting (the seam tape on neoprene feet and GORE-TEX® seam tape inside the garment comes off). Delaminating of the fabric can also occur. Common for all products is that the growth of mildew starts a general material breakdown as it produces enzymes that convert the cellulose or protein in the fabric into the compounds on which it feeds - basically speaking, mildew slowly breaks down the garment and eats it!

After gear is properly dried it should always be stored in a cool, dry environment with adequate ventilation. If a product is infested by mildew it should be isolated by sealing it in a polythene bag and either disposed of immediately, or sent to trained professionals for decontamination.

Self-repairs

If you get leaks along any seam in a waterproof, breathable garment you should not do a self-repair to those areas. Most reported seam leaks are, in fact, pinholes along the seam tape and not a true seam leak. Aquaseal or other adhesives do not come off and any self-repair that is done along a seam may potentially void your warranty as manufacturers cannot remove and correct the problem without destroying the seam.

REVIVEX® application and upkeep

Over time and with exposure to rushing water, long days in the rain, dirt and other factors your GORE-TEX® garment may begin to 'wet out' and no longer repel water effectively from the surface fabric. This is usually a result of the DWR (Durable Water Repellency) wearing off. Although water isn't leaking all the way through the garment, it may feel and look like it is because 'wet out' reduces breathability and creates excess interior condensation making you feel damp and cold. It is easily addressed with the use of REVIVEX® but do follow the instructions carefully.

SPORTFISH CUSTOMERS'

FISH OF THE YEAR 2023

As we look forward to an exciting new season, we asked our customers to send in some images and a few words about their best fish of 2023.

We had some cracking entries and it's been a tough job to select only 5 to feature in the catalogue. Thank you to all those who sent in their entries. Highly commended were Karl Bird with a stunning leopard coral grouper, Lukasz Mularczyk with a 113cm pike and 40cm perch, Steve Ely with a 62cm brown trout, Simon Holme with a sight fished Icelandic sea trout and Cameron Osborn with a fine salmon. Our 5 winners are below, we look forward to seeing your entries for this season next year!

SANDY KING

This beautiful 15lb autumn pike was caught on my first attempt with a fly. I researched what kit was required and attached a wire trace with my own home-tied pike streamer fly to my dad's Airflo Bluetooth Nano reservoir trout rod and went exploring the local stretches of the River Swale.

AMY HULME

A warm summer's evening on the River Tweed and, after much perseverance, I finally connected with a fish. What a relief! A lovely first fish of the 2023 season at around 8lbs caught on my Guideline NT8 rod, RIO Outbound #8 floating line with 10ft intermediate tip and using a size 8 patriot cascade double.

DAN HOGG

Mid-September and my first trip to fish Lower Redeswood beat of the North Tyne. It was our first run through the pool with the river at a perfect height. I was using my Nam 13'2 #8 with a RIO Scandi Outbound and an intermediate tip with a Calvin Shrimp tube fly. This was my first ever sea trout, weighing in at 9lb.

ANTHONY REES

Caught in November, this brownie was my first cast of the day on Llyn Clywedog Trout Fishery in Wales and came in at 9lb 7oz. After a 30-minute battle I landed the fish and safely returned it. I was using my trusty Loop rod and caught the fish using a pink snake.

SAM THOMAS

My first salmon in over a decade, caught first cast of the day on a wet evening on the River Towy using an Abu Garcia spinning rod and reel given to me by my grandfather. Two others followed that week, however this one was estimated at 14lb and was the most memorable.

RUNNING WATER:

1 Understand the species you are chasing.

This can give vital clues to how and where to look for them. In its most basic form, understanding the effects that water height, temperature and the risk & reward that feeding can have on non-migratory fish will help lead you to success.

2 Temperature. Water temperatures directly affect the metabolic rate and therefore the demand for food in species like trout. In low water temperatures trout will often adopt holding lies rather than feeding lies. In a holding lie, sanctuary, safety and energy conservation may be a higher priority than food abundance, whilst in very high-water temperatures higher oxygen levels will be the priority and, in some cases, most feeding activity will be focused on the cooler periods including the dead of night or early morning.

3 Holding lies. These tend to be in more moderate-paced water with a high degree of cover to offer security. Cover can come in the form of deeper water, structure, overhead cover or even just areas of shade tight to a bank. Feeding does of course still occur in these areas, but it can be more opportunistic.

4 Feeding lies. These tend to be areas that have a higher rate of water flow. This provides more food in the drift both from any hatch activity but also from any terrestrial source like overhanging trees. Feeding lies can be found in many different water types and depths, and depend to some degree on the type of food available. As an example, if the "reward" is high, a fish may forego some of the risk of actively feeding in a shallow exposed area to pack in some calories. A good example of this is minnow feeding trout or spent spinner feeders, both types of feeding typically happening in shallower areas (although not always).

5 Understanding the relationship between risk & reward. This can help you choose effective areas to fish. In good "normal" early summer water temperatures and reasonable conditions with say a light hatch of Olives, a good area to target would be the slightly more moderate paced water immediately adjacent to a faster riffle with some form of overhang. This type of lie gives a good combination of an easy holding area, close to a high food production zone with the added appeal of overhead cover. As you progress as an angler and become more experienced in understanding the habits and tendencies of fish in differing water types you can really start to "second guess" good areas to target that may be overlooked or ruled out by less experienced anglers.

6 "Always" and "Never" don't generally apply to fishing. Particularly true in the case of trout, understanding the sliding scale of "Risk vs Reward" can be a big advantage with even very large fish seemingly "breaking the rules" by adopting less-common lies if the reward is worth it.

STILLWATERS:

1 Understand both the species and the water type.

This is paramount to success. For simplicity's sake, breaking trout lakes into "natural" or "stocked" waters can give you some big head starts.

2 Stocked lakes. Stocked fish tend to act differently than wild or naturalised fish, particularly when first introduced. Often finding one fish can lead to finding a lot as they tend to take some time to disperse. In the early season when natural food may be scarce and stocked fish are the target, looking for areas that can be easily accessed is often a good starting point. It also important to keep in mind just how quickly stocked fish can follow the wind, this may move them a long way from where they were introduced in a short amount of time.

3 Natural lakes. Wild or naturalised fish tend to behave differently to recently stocked fish and more watercraft can be needed to locate them. In the case of nutrient-poor lakes, most of the available food may well be terrestrial in origin and this alone can make targeting the upwind bank a main tactic, particularly in areas of trees, long grass or heather. Many times, fish can be found in inches of water at the very top of the wind. In lakes with more natural food, the type of food that predominates will often give you some pointers. If it's buzzers, look for water in the 6-10ft range with a silt or mud bottom. For shrimp feeders, again it can be within inches of the bank.

4 Water temperatures. Like in rivers, water temperatures can be a huge indicator of where trout may be found. In the early season, shallower marginal water may be warmed quicker by weak early-season sunlight and fish can often be found closer to banks looking for food. Shooting forward a few months, prolonged spells of high temps can push surface water temps to uncomfortable or even dangerous levels for trout so prospecting the depths or at least fishing around drop-offs into deeper water are all valuable pointers.

SUPPORTING ENVIRONMENTAL CHARITIES

At Sportfish we're very proud of our longstanding support of 3 major national environmental charities to help the conservation of our fish and rivers and to encourage new audiences into the sport. These are the Wild Trout Trust, the Atlantic Salmon Trust, and the Angling Trust (see back page for more info). We do whatever we can to promote them, from offering prize donations for their auctions to spreading their messages across our own channels via our website, email marketing, social media and blog.

WILD TROUT TRUST

Last year over 1,000 Sportfish customers answered our online survey, and more than 50% of them said that they were members of or supported a national river or fish conservation charity. This figure is really encouraging, and we'll continue to ask this question every year to monitor growth. We hope that more and more anglers will get involved however they can to protect what we love.

This year we've introduced two new initiatives that will help us in our environmental mission even more. Firstly, we have decided to offer all our staff a paid volunteering day each year. They will be encouraged to support our chosen charities if they can, or to do something that helps the environment, whether that's spending a day cleaning up litter on a river or helping to plant trees in a local park. Secondly, we've added two local river conservation organisations that are close to our Sportfish stores in Theale (next to the River Kennet) and in Winforton (next to the River Wye):

The River Wye

The Wye & Usk Foundation is a rivers trust that improves the ecology, habitat and water quality of the rivers Wye and Usk. They are the largest rivers' trust in England and Wales in terms of output and a leader in their field, developing new techniques and delivering improvements for the aquatic environment.

The River Kennet

Action for the River Kennet is the rivers trust for the Kennet and Pang catchments, dedicated to protecting and improving their health. They carry out practical conservation projects from small to large scale, and campaign to protect the rivers and raise awareness, working closely with communities, landowners and stakeholders.

BARRY ORD CLARKE

Author, photographer and multiple award-winning fly tyer

FLY TYING FOR BEGINNERS

The nature of fly fishing for most of us is such that once you have taken the first step and learned to cast with a fly rod and eventually land your first fish, you gain instant membership to a very special international group that has no cultural or social boundaries. We all become members of one and the same family - fly fishers.

Our enthusiasm and hunger for knowledge within our sport and its related subjects becomes a vocation. Whenever and wherever we meet, by the water on a warm mid-summer's day or around a table on a cold winter's night, with old fishing friends or total strangers, we eagerly exchange experiences, techniques and sometimes even well-kept secrets. If you are new to our sport, you truly have something to look forward to. You may find the technical language a little difficult to begin with but it doesn't take long before you are talking in tongues. No matter where you meet a member of this family, you will always have something to talk about, with the conversation easily flowing from tackle, big fish, destinations and, finally, flies and fly tying.

The second step, and probably the most natural progression from fly fishing, is to fly tying. With the industrialisation of the production of the fishing hook and the time-consuming production of fishing flies being moved to countries with cheaper labour, the days are gone where fly fishermen tied flies out of financial necessity. As with fly fishing, there is a certain amount of equipment you 'need' to obtain, and techniques that help to be learned, before you can embark on the second lifelong journey of the fly fisher - to the fly tying bench.

Through fly tying the fly fisher can open previously locked doors and enter a whole new world of their sport, customising existing patterns to their own specific requirements, and even designing their own!

The first flies that a beginner attempts to tie are normally familiar patterns that have worked well for them. This is always a good place to start, as long as the patterns don't require any overly difficult techniques, procedures or special materials that are not easy to obtain in a sufficient quality. Frustration at this early stage can quickly lead to failure, and a danger of your fly tying kit ending-up in the attic along with the windsurfing board and golf clubs.

On the other hand, if the beginner starts their fly tying journey with a couple of fishable patterns that are technically easy but still rewarding to tie, these can be the stepping stones to more advanced and challenging patterns, with the help of which they will eventually be able to tie all the flies they require, and many more.

Vice

This is the single most expensive item you need as a fly tyer, so your choice should be made carefully. You should consider how many and what type of flies you will be tying and what size hooks you will be using. Beyond the prime function of holding the hook securely, modern vices incorporate a number of additional functions of varying usefulness. Adjustable height, jaw angle and full rotation are now standard in most models.

Tools

There are a few essential tools that you will also need:

Scissors

It's unreasonable to expect one pair of scissors to do all the cutting jobs required when tying flies. Eventually you will need two: one high quality pair with fine sharp points for all the delicate precise work needed and a second probably less expensive pair for all the heavy-duty cutting jobs of tinsel, wire etc. When buying scissors, make sure that your finger and thumb fit comfortably in the handles, so you can slip in and out of them easily and exchange them for other tools without the need for a second hand.

Bobbin holder

This is the tool that holds and dispenses your tying thread. A poor-quality bobbin holder will only result in frustration! It's worth investing in a good quality ceramic bobbin holder, which is far superior to other models.

Hackle plier

You will find it much easier to steer your hackles when wound if you use a hackle plier. They come in many designs and price ranges. I use and can highly recommend the rotary hackle model which will keep the hackle from twisting when wound. Whatever hackle plier you choose, it's important that the jaws are tight and hold even the finest hackle point.

Dubbing needle

This is the simplest tool for fly tying and the least expensive, but also one of the most useful, with many tasks to perform: applying varnish, picking out dubbing, splitting thread etc. Choose a dubbing needle with a long handle and a short needle. Ones with a long needle are impossible to use for precise work.

Materials

Once you start tying flies you will quickly understand how much easier it is to tie good flies with quality materials. Start by buying the few materials that you need to tie a handful of patterns that you will fish with. When buying materials be aware that no matter how similar they look no two natural materials are the same. Feathers and fur come from individual birds and animals whose lifestyle, geography, diet and time of year that they were culled are all contributing factors to the quality of the material.

When buying your first vice, tying kit or materials, the experienced staff at Sportfish can help you make the right decision, not only for the type of flies that you intend to tie, but also for your budget. It's also beneficial to start by learning and mastering the basic techniques, no matter how simple - once mastered they will become the advanced skills that will help you succeed, no matter what you tie. A good beginner's book and some lessons with a local club or branch of The Fly Dressers Guild will also give you valuable advice.

Barry's books and Fly-Tying Material pack for the beginner and the experienced fly tyer are available from Sportfish see page 193 and 211.

SPORTFISH TRADE-IN PROGRAM

We all want to use the best kit and get the most from our fishing. However, each season technological improvements in rods, reels, and other equipment seem to get faster and faster.

Sometimes it's difficult to justify "trading up", especially if you bought a new rod or reel just a few seasons ago and it's still in good condition and working fine. At Sportfish we want you to enjoy every minute you spend fishing. If you really want that new piece of kit then we are here to help you get it.

Our approach is simple and straightforward:

1. Come in and see us and bring the rod or reel that you would like to trade-in with you. If this is not practical call our mail order centre on 01544 327111.
2. We will consider a trade-in deal on any good quality rod or reel that is made by a premium brand eg. Hardy, Sage, Guideline, Orvis, Loomis, Loop, Abel, Waterworks Lamson, Nautilus, Tibor etc.

It must be in good condition, and have a reasonable resale value. We can also sort out minor repairs if required.

3. We've been running this trade-in program for a long time so we've already worked out the best price we can offer for a wide variety of rods and reels. For items that are not already on our trade-in list we can usually work out a price quickly.

4. You tell us what you what want to buy and we'll do our very best to offer a great trade-in on that new product.
5. Assuming we can agree a deal, we will take your old tackle off your hands, and you will be the proud owner of the latest and best rod or reel available.
6. We will then clean up and sell your old item in-store or online.

It really is that simple, so come and talk to us.

We won't always be able to help but we'll certainly try our best. Assuming we can help, you'll get great new kit at a reduced cost, you'll feel good about recycling, and somewhere a fellow angler will be very happy to take on your old tackle.

Everybody wins.

OUR FISHING

Set amidst 45 acres of delightful Berkshire countryside the Sportfish Game Fishing Centre offers fishing of the very highest quality on two lakes and one small beginner's pool.

Haywards Farm Lake

Our 12-acre day ticket water is spring fed and crystal clear, with an abundance of fly life that makes for exceptional sport. The superbly sculpted landscaping allows for excellent access and unimpeded casting. Bays, promontories, reed-fringed margins and variable depths afford a variety of different fishing opportunities. Regular stocking is with a mix of high quality, full-finned rainbows with a good proportion of blue and brown trout. The fish average around 3lb, with plenty in the 5lb to 8lb range, and there is a good head of doubles with rainbows to over 13lb and browns to 15lb. There is ample free parking and a lodge offering a lounge area, kitchen, toilet facilities, microwave, fridge and outside picnic and barbeque areas. All our tickets include catch and release fishing once the catch limit is met.

Haywards Farm Lake ticket prices	Price
Full day catch & release (C&R)	£45.00
2 fish + C&R	£50.00
3 fish + C&R	£55.00
4 fish + C&R	£60.00

Hobby Lake

This exclusive 5-acre lake is available for private hire for parties of 2-10 fishermen. It's a perfect venue for friends and family to get together, or on which to stage small corporate events. Spring fed, crystal clear and full of fly life, it offers superb floating line fishing with nymphs and dry fly and is stocked with rainbow, blue, brown, golden and tiger trout to double figures. The lake is always rested between bookings, so is not heavily fished, giving you every chance of a red letter day. The price includes exclusive use of Hobby Lake, Hobby lodge, barbeque facilities, with up to 4 fish retained per person. We supply all you need for a blissful day, all you have to bring is your own food and drink.

3 anglers	12 fish	£325.00
4 anglers	16 fish	£400.00

Additional anglers (to a maximum of 6 – maximum total group size 10) £75.00 each.
All fish must be taken up to the party limit, thereafter, catch and release on Haywards Farm Lake.

Kingfisher Pond

Encouraging youngsters to engage with nature conservation and learn about fishing and the wider aquatic environment is challenging but Sportfish, in conjunction with the Environment Agency, has done just that with the creation of Kingfisher Pond. Planted with a diverse range of native aquatic plants and stocked with young trout it is a key part of the Sportfish tuition scheme to benefit both youngsters learning to fish and those simply looking to explore the aquatic environment.

Fishing lessons on Kingfisher Pond cost £25 and last for 30 minutes. A parent or guardian must be present at all times if the fisher is under 16 years of age. The session includes fly casting tuition with one of our instructors and one trout to take home. If you wish to catch and keep further fish during the session, these may be purchased at £4.95 per lb (454g). If you just want to fish the pond, without a lesson, the cost is £5.00 per day. All trout must be retained and will be charged at the rate above.

PEACE OF MIND – CREDIT CARD SECURITY

Once on our systems, all sensitive data is secured using the same internationally recognised 256-bit encryption standards used by, among others, the US Government. The encryption keys are held on state-of-the-art, tamper proof systems in the same family as those used to secure VeriSign's Global Root certificate, making them all but impossible to extract. The data we hold is extremely secure and we are regularly audited by the banks and banking authorities to ensure it remains so.

Our payments partner, Braintree, is a validated Level 1 PCI DSS compliant service provider. All transactional cardholder data is managed in the Braintree Vault, using multiple encryption keys with split knowledge and dual control. You may be assured that your cardholder data is safe and that any would-be data thief could not make use of any information stolen from a database without also having the key and this data store cannot be connected to via the internet.

WE'RE PROUD TO SUPPORT:

PUTTING WILD SALMON FIRST

Wild Atlantic salmon could disappear altogether from our rivers in 30 years. The Atlantic Salmon Trust uses scientific research to understand their decline, and puts evidence-based solutions into practice.

WILD TROUT TRUST

INSPIRING EVERYONE TO PROTECT WILD TROUT AND THEIR HABITAT

WTT experts work with landowners, local communities, fishing clubs, rivers trusts and government agencies providing practical advice and hands-on habitat improvement projects.

HELP PROTECT FISH, FISHING AND THE ENVIRONMENT

A not for profit member-based organisation made up of anglers of all disciplines providing a united front to represent, grow and protect the sport.

BY THOSE WHO FISH.
FOR THOSE WHO FISH.
